Pressure injuries in aged care

Audience: All aged care staff and healthcare providers working in aged care settings

Current evidence in Australia indicates that up to 70% of high-risk residents may develop a pressure injury while living in residential aged care facilities. This places considerable strain on the healthcare system and, more importantly, has a significant impact on a person's quality of life. The positive is that pressure injuries are preventable when appropriate measures are implemented, which is what we will be focusing on in this session
